While our climate cannot be excelled, if equalled, and these mountain people, kind and gentle, we have but few of the comforts that you enjoy daily in so far as variety of food is concerned. Our living is beyond doubt rough—as rough as I have ever seen. Yet we all eat heartily, and all enjoy excellent health. Just to think of it, not a doctor within 100 miles, and not a grain of any elast for the few sick we have here I have been in the habit of giving such plain and simple medicines as I have to those who call on me for aid. Some times I earnestly wish that it understood medicine well, for it would do me real pleasure to be of service to this simple and primitive people. I like to do good where I can. Since Christmas we have head a bonanza in the way of weddings and dances. Our little nest in the mountains has been quite lively for two months past.

The levees, of course, are roined. The damage in dollars and earnes and eents cannot be estimated just now. Still, to sit in sackcloth and ashes will not mend matters fast. All we weak mortals on this part of the globe can do is to keep in the ark and wait until the dove returns.
